Finance Committee Urges Greater
Economy in Administration of
All Departments—Report Issued
Friday.

The recommendations of the committee of twenty-one were issued yesterday morning, printed in pamphlet form. The main object in view, as even a hasty reading of the report shows, is the lessening of the tax rate in the town. It is said that several of the departments are not entirely satisfied with the cutting down of their appropriations, and in consequence the town meeting, Monday night, is likely to be a lively one.

QUIETLY MARRIED.

Rev. Frederic Gill and Miss Ruth Pierson Married in Somerville.

The marriage of Rev. Frederic Gill, pastor of the Unitarian church, and Miss Ruth Pierson, was quietly solemnized, Wednesday evening, at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. and Mrs. William H. Pierson, in Somerville. Beside the bride and groom, only Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Gill, of New York, witnessed the ceremony. The marriage service was performed by Rev. William H. Pierson. A reception followed, from 8 to 10, the time being divided into two periods, of which the first hour was for Arlington friends, the second being reserved for guests from Somerville. This division of time was necessary on account of the large number invited, over 800 invitations having been sent out, representing six different parishes. The bride party received in the large parish reception room of the parsonage.

The bride's gown was white crepe de chene. The ushers were friends of the bride from Boston, Brookline and Somerville. Arlington was represented by Mrs. William G. Rice and Miss Cairra Robbins. Numerous and beautiful presents sent the bride were displayed in two rooms on the third floor of the house. There were checks for $300, and other amounts. A card mentioned the gift of the Arlington parish, of which mention was made last week. The presents included pictures, much silver and glass, books and several rugs. One of the latter was especially pleasing as coming from the Somerville Sunday school, from active work in which the bride was compelled to retire several years ago on account of ill health.

Mr. and Mrs. Gill, after a short trip, will make their home at 23 Academy street, where they will be at home Wednesdays in June.

SENIORS ENTERTAIN.

Class of 1902, A. H. S., Proves Itself a Delightful Host.

For some years past it has been the custom for the senior class of the Arlington high school to entertain their fellow students, teachers, parents and friends at what has come to be known as the "senior social." Nineteen hundred and two did so last Monday evening, at the school hall, where a large audience showed its appreciation of the excellent program presented. Grey's orchestra—Frank A. Grey, piano, Julius Hackel, violin, and Henry Leeds, flute—opened with a medley of popular airs. His orchestra is becoming too well known in Arlington to need words of praise in these columns. Miss Marion Churchill, president of the class, followed with a few well chosen and well delivered words of greeting, after which Misses Marion Foster and Helen Bridgman played a piano duet.

The two-act farce, "The Cool Collegians," was then given with the following cast of characters: Harry Meredith and Fred Parks, college chums, Hathaway Mills and Louis A. Moore, respectively. Mrs. Huntoon, Fred's aunt, Marion Churchill, Fannie Morrison, her niece, Ruth Richardson, Mollie Vainwright, Fannie's friend, Constance Yeames, Muggins, colored servant, Arthur Trowbridge, Kate, Irish servant, Harriet Jones. Scenes—Act I, Fred's college room; act II, sitting room in Mrs. Huntoon's cottage at L. did so well. Individual work can hardly be spoken of, although, perhaps, Marion Churchill's portrayal of the dignified aunt stood out somewhat in relief. Constance Yeames and Ruth Richardson looked and acted their parts well, while the college chums were certainly good. The antics of Muggins and Kate kept the audience in an uproar. The stage setting was excellent, no little labor being needed to give so good an idea of a boy's room at college. Misses Helen Damon and Alice Homer, who have helped to drill the different actors, deserve credit for their smoothness and general excellence of the performance.

Between the acts a piano solo was played by Fred Butterfield, who found it necessary to respond to hearty cheers. Julius Hackel then played Wieniawski's "Legend," accompanied by Mr. Butterfield on the piano. After another selection by the orchestra, the members of the high school rose in their places and the school sang to the tune of the "Stein Song."

A social hour followed, frappe and crackers being served by members of the senior class. The opportunity for graduates and old schoolmates to greet each other and former teachers was used to advantage. Members of the junior class acted as ushers.

The Arlington branch of the Hospital Aid society will hold a "combination party" in the town hall a week from next Monday evening. What will be played until ten, refreshments will be served, followed by dancing until one. John A. Bishop, president of the local branch, has the affair in charge.

FIREMEN'S BALL.

A Successful Affair Monday
Night.

Bright Entertainment and Plenty of Dancing—An Abundance of Good
Things to Eat and a Good Time All Around—Everybody Pleased.

The eleventh annual ball of the Arlington Firemen's Relief association, last Monday night, was a great success. The auditorium of the town hall was filled to the doors when the entertainment began at a little after 8 o'clock, some 800 persons being present. The program provided was a varied and pleasing one all the participants doing their devoir heartily and appreciatively. After the first number, an overture rendered manfully by the orchestra, Mrs. Henry A. Kidder, of Addison street, Arlington, told in effective and fetching fashion James Whitcomb Riley's "Bear Story." William E. Dodge, also of Arlington, as the third number, gave a violin solo, played with skill and dash. Number four was another selection by the orchestra, after which Dudley Prescott, of Boston, undoubtedly a humorist by birth, as well as by profession, furnished a half hour's amusement to his audience by a series of imitations, impersonations and other specialties, not only comical, but also remarkable for their variety and excellence.

CHIEF CHARLES GOTT

able for their variety and excellence. His "wireless telephone" act, particularly, was enjoyed by the audience, the ventriloquism being well executed. For the sixth number the orchestra again held forth. Mrs. Kidder rendered the trial scene from "To Have and To Hold," specially arranged by herself, retaining successfully to the end the attention of an assemblage obviously eager for the dancing to begin. After a slight interruption, Mr. Dodge, for the eighth and last number on the program, played a selection of three short pieces, the Oberliss, the Angel's Serenade and L'Abelle. The numbers of the program were announced by Warren A. Pierce, of the entertainment committee.

Immediately thereafter arose the clatter of seats being hastily shuffled away, and in a surprisingly short time the hall was cleared and ready for the dancing. Precisely at 10:30, Assistant Chief Engineer Timothy J. Donahue, floor director of the evening, led off with Mrs. Donahue in the grand march, followed by about 100 couples. Captain and Mrs. W. J. Sweeney were second in line. From then until nearly one o'clock succeeded a program of dances, varied with waltzes, polkas, quadrilles and numberless encores strenuously demanded by the enthusiastic dancers. At one o'clock came the intermission, some of the people going to their homes, but a large number taking a refreshing walk up to Menotomy hall, where Arlington's own caterer had prepared the spread, with a menu elaborate and satisfying.

Escalloped Oysters
Potato Salad
Roast Turkey, Cranberry Sauce
Sugar Cured Ham
Mashed Potatoes with Cream
Frozen Pudding
Raisin Cake
Cocoanut Cake
Nut Cake
Kisses
Chocolate, Strawberry, Harlequin and Vanilla Ice Cream
Pineapple Sherbet
Raspberry Sherbet
Coffee
Pickles
Apples
Rolls
Bananas

About 150 plates were served, the great part in Menotomy hall, but the guests of the evening being provided for in N. J. Hardy's store. After an hour's intermission the dancing was resumed and continued until four, with unabated enjoyment. An account of the firemen's ball would be hardly complete without reference to Chief Charles Gott and his long and faithful service.

At the close of the present year, Chief Gott will have been a member of William Penn hose company for thirty years, for he joined the company in 1873. In 1875 he was appointed engineer, and in 1877 he received the appointment of chief, which he has held ever since, or for 25 years, making his record an enviable one. The officials of the organization in charge of the dancing were: Chief of party, Charles Gott, chief engineer of the Arlington fire department; floor director, Assistant Engineer T. J. Donahue; assistant floor directors, Capt. William J. Sweeney, Capt. P. J. Powers, Capt. Jacob Schumacher, Capt. E. W. Schwamb, and Thomas K. Millett.

The aids were William A. Irwin, R. J. Murray, J. Wm. Kenney, John F. Conolly, William H. Bradley, James H. Prendergast, William Dinsmore, John J. Cashman, James Hutchinson, Edward J. Crowe, Daniel M. Daley, L. V. Gay, Wm. Spiers, William C. Mead, Patrick J. Jacob Schumacher, Capt. E. W. Schwamb, and Thomas K. Millett.

The reception committee comprised Chief Charles Gott, Warren A. Pierce, George Hill, E. W. Schwamb, Sylvester Mead, A. Foster Brooks, R. W. LeBaron, T. J. Donahue and William E. Conant. The entertainment committee was composed of Warren A. Pierce, E. W. Schwamb and William H. Bradley.

The ushers were Daniel B. Tierney, George W. Corbett, E. W. Schwamb, J. H. Harwood and William H. Bradley. On the committee of arrangements were Chief Charles Gott, chairman, E. P. Winn, treasurer, Capt. E. W. Schwamb, secretary, W. J. Sweeney, John Barry, William Dinsmore, Dennis Ahern, William C. Mead, W. A. Irwin, J. J. Cashman, T. E. Donovan, J. J. Murray, D. M. Daley, T. K. Millett, W. H. Bradley, Jacob Schumacher, P. J. Powers, Joseph Buckley, W. T. Farrell, E. J. Crowe, A. F. Brooks, T. J. Donahue, William Spiers, J. L. Axman, T. A. Smith, Archie E. Warren, A. Pierce.

The prominent guests of the association present were Selectmen E. B. Farmer, George I. Doe and Walter Crosby, Sup. of Streets E. Kimball, Chief of Police of Streets S. E. Harriman, Supt. of Wires R. W. LeBaron, Park Commissioner Thomas Hogan, Capt. Judd and Fire Commissioner er Herve, of Everett, Mr. Thompson, of the Fireman's Standard, Lieut. Burke, John Dardis, Charles Emerson, John McDermott, John Coakley, Joseph Henderson, of the Cambridge fire department, Capt. P. H. Mead, James Ryan, Edward Ryan, Lawrence Ryan and James Quigley, of the Belmont department, Col. Royal B. Conant, Matthew Rowe, Theodore Schwamb, Capt. Waldo Cutter, ex-Engineers F. P. Winn and Chas. Hill, Capt. J. H. Read, and many others.

C. E. CONVENTION.

The committee on the program of the Middlesex County C. E. union, consisting of the district secretary, Miss Emma Ostrom Nichols, of East Lexington; Mr. James W. Hibbs, of Somerville; Miss Ella P. Stiles, of Newton; Mr. George A. Goodridge, of Cambridge; Mr. A. W. Robinson, of Natick; and Mr. Herbert A. Snow, of Arlington Heights, has completed its labors and announces a very attractive program for the convention to be held at Medford on April 19th.

The general subject of the convention is "Personal Responsibility." The afternoon session, which will be held at 2 o'clock in the Mystic Congregational church, will begin with a praise service led by Mr. Oscar F. Hill, of Medford, followed by a "Preparation Service" by Mr. S. W. Sayford, of Boston, secretary of the N. E. Evangelistic association. The principal address of the afternoon will be made by Rev. A. C. Linton, D.D., pastor of the Ruggles street Baptist church, and formerly of New York city, on "Responsibility for the Individual." This address will be followed by brief talks on various phases of C. E. work by Rev. F. E. Emrich, D.D., of South Framingham; Rev. A. Kenyon, of Lowell, past president of the Lowell union; Rev. Arthur H. Gordon, of Cambridge, son of the late Rev. A. J. Gordon, of the Clarendon street church, Boston; Rev. C. H. Percival, of Everett; and Rev. Charles F. Carter, of Lexington.

In the evening, two simultaneous meetings with the same speakers will be held, in the Mystic Congregational and the Methodist Episcopal churches. Rev. F. A. Noble, D.D., of Chicago, who recently retired from active service after a pastorate of a quarter of a century at one church, will speak on a good citizenship topic, "Can We Trust Our Democracy?" and Rev. Courtney H. Fenn, of New York, who was at the siege of Peking, will address the convention on "Personal Responsibility for Foreign Missions."

The ping-pong craze has struck Arlington, the golf club it is the "thing" every evening, and many families have sets in their homes. A tournament is in order.

BELMONT.

Miss Grace Richardson is home from Vassar college for the spring recess. Miss Annie S. Irvin, who teaches in Roxbury, will spend the spring vacation at the home of her sister, Mrs. Royal T. Broderick, of Orchard street.

The Belmont club held a concert in its rooms, Wednesday evening. A fine musical program was rendered by the Belmont Orchestral club. Dancing followed.

John Edwards has recovered from his recent illness and returned to his post of duty at the Fitchburg division depot.

George Reed, of Harvard divinity school, will speak at the Unitarian church, tomorrow. At a meeting of the parish committee, held Monday evening, it was voted to call Mr. Reed to assume charge of the parish to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Bygrave. Mrs. B. F. Palmer, of Goden street, died at her late home last Friday, after a lingering illness. High mass was solemnized by Fr. Murphy at St. Joseph's church, Monday morning. The funeral was very largely attended by the townspeople, all of whom had a most kind regard for the deceased. Much sympathy is felt for her bereaved husband.

Miss Minnie Wilkins has returned to Dean academy, Franklin, Mass., after a vacation spent at home.

Henry Hooker died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. F. G. Houghton, on Goden street, Sunday of last week, and was buried Tuesday.

There was no school Thursday or Friday of last week on account of Teachers' convention and Good Friday.

The Belmont Hospital Aid society held a meeting at the rooms of the Belmont club, last Monday afternoon, instead of the first Monday in April.

The annual school sociable of the Belmont High School Literary and Debating society was held last evening in the school building.

The Belmont club will hold its second whist at its rooms on Leonard avenue, next Thursday evening.

The townspeople are invited to an indoor athletic meet of the Waverley Athletic association and the K. K. C. H. I. in the town hall, at 8 p.m., next Friday. The program will consist of athletic feats such as broad jump, high jump, pole vault, etc., followed by a basketball game between the Waverley Tennis club and K. K. C. H. I. Admission 25 cents; reserved seats 35 cents.

Adjourned town meeting will be held in the town hall at 7:30, next Monday evening.

The members of the K. K. C. H. I. basketball team are deserving of the reputation they are establishing in gaining so many victories. The team has won every game it has played this season, and has done this at a great inconvenience, as it has had to play each game away from home, having no regular gymnasium. The game with St. John's team at Cambridge was a close one.

CURIOUS KOREAN CUSTOM.

The Battle of Stones Which Marks Beginning of New Year.

One of the most curious customs in Korea marks the advent of the new year. This is the battle with stones, participated in by inhabitants of Seoul. At a spot about a mile and a half outside the city walls, on the main road to the Han river, the people assemble by thousands either as witnesses or participants in this truly remarkable exhibition of warlike good will. By previous arrangement piles of stones are in readiness, all carefully selected and of a convenient size.

Without previous selection of combatants the participants form themselves into opposing armies, about the only qualification for service being apparently the ability to hurl a stone at the advancing forces of the enemy. At first the stone throwing is at long range and uninteresting, but as the throwing continues the forces draw nearer, and the fight waxing fast and furious, men being detailed to collect the stones into heaps again or fetch fresh ammunition for the firing line. Then the clash comes, the two bodies meet, fierce rushes are made, stones are discarded, and knives and clubs are freely used. The clash of weapons, the screams of the combatants, the surging mass of men, some being trampled to death, now falling, now struggling to their feet, the blood flowing from numerous cuts—the whole goes to make a picture that depicts anything but the joy we attribute to the coming of a new year. The fight is kept up until the clang of the great city bell tells the combatants that it is time to return home.

Perhaps the most singular feature of the celebration is that during the remaining eleven months of the year the Korean is as amiable a person as can be found in any country, and by some writers the average Korean is characterized as the most abject coward on the face of the earth.

But, cowards or no cowards, the Korean people still indulge, as they have for years, in this annual warlike welcome of the new year. Indeed it is legal in Korea to fight not only on New Year's day, but during the first moon or month of the year. The custom has become a national institution, sanctioned by the government and patronized by the king and the nobility. The police attend the battles, but merely to keep order among the spectators. Fighting is the Korean's privilege with the advent of each new year, and he is expected to exercise that privilege to the extent of his ability if he would be accounted a good, country loving Korean.—New York Tribune.

Florence Nightingale's Real Name.

The fact is but little known that the family name of Florence Nightingale was not originally Nightingale, but Shore. Her father was a rich Sheffield banker of the name of Shore and connected with an old family which had been in possession of land in the counties of Derby and York since the fifteenth century. Mr. Shore assumed the name of Nightingale long after the birth of his children and because he inherited the fortune and estates of his mother's uncle. There were but two children in the family, both girls. The eldest was named Parthenosse, because she was born in Athens, and this name was supposed to indicate her father's profound admiration for the Parthenon. The younger, Florence, was also named after the city of her birth.

The Retort Judicial.

When Judge Barnard was on the bench and holding court in Poughkeepsie, a lawyer who did not like him chanced to see a one cent coin lying on the floor. Picking it up and holding it forth in ostentatious display, he said: "I imagine, your honor, from the value of this coin, that it must belong to the court."

"And I imagine," replied Judge Barnard, "that if it was not such a small coin the court never would have seen it."—New York Times.

Ingalls on Butter.

Many years ago, when John J. Ingalls, the brilliant Kansan, was a member of the senate, oleomargarine was a bone of contention. The debate led Ingalls to utter one of those epigrammatic sentences which made him famous. "I have never, to my knowledge, tasted oleomargarine," said Ingalls, "but I have stood in the presence of genuine butter with awe for its strength and reverence for its antiquity."

A CHURCH LIGHTHOUSE.

Charleston, S. C., Has the Only One in the World.

The only church in the world so far as is known that is also a lighthouse is St. Philip's church, Charleston, S. C.

St. Philip's, which is one of the oldest churches in America, is known as the "Westminster abbey of South Carolina," because within and about its walls so many distinguished men lie buried, including John C. Calhoun. The history of the old church is closely interwoven with that of South Carolina, and many of the most celebrated events in the history of the province are connected with it.

It is one of the sights of Charleston, and strangers are always taken to see it and shown its graves and monuments.

The most remarkable feature of the old church, however, is the fact that its lofty steeple serves the purpose of a lighthouse and is used to guide the seafarer and mariner safely into the port of Charleston. The use of the steeple as a lighthouse dates back to 1894, when the United States lighthouse department succeeded by dint of repeated efforts in inducing the vestry of the old church to allow a lantern to be placed in the upper story of the steeple to be used as a range light for vessels entering the harbor through the jetties at its mouth.

The light used is very powerful and is placed at an altitude of about 125 feet above the ground, so that it is easily visible thirty miles at sea. Ships making for Charleston harbor at night always keep a sharp lookout for St. Philip's light and as soon as they sight it get it into line with the beacon on Fort Sumter and then make a straight-away run for the mouth of the jetties and up through them into the harbor of Charleston.

St. Philip's church steeple is considered one of the handsomest architectural structures in the world and always attracts the eye of strangers entering Charleston from the sea by its commanding height and artistic proportions.—St. Louis Republic.

NATURAL HISTORY.

There are forty-eight different kinds of house fly known and classified.

The pig is the only domestic animal in which no case of cancer has been noted.

The Spanish mackerel is one of the fastest of food fishes and cuts the water like a yacht.

Fish swallow their food whole because they are obliged to keep continually opening and closing the mouth for the purpose of respiration.

Siamese cats, both in appearance and character, closely resemble pug dogs. Even their tails have the curious curl so familiar in these stolid dogs.

Animals are found to be subject to hypnotic influence. Lobsters, it is said, can be hypnotized by standing them on their heads five or ten minutes.

There is no wild breed of fowl to which the Brahma or Cochon can be traced. The gamecock seems to be descended from the Cingalese jungle fowl.

The flesh fly produces about 20,000 young in a season. The larvae are hatched almost instantly from the egg and at once begin their work of destruction.

A Contrast.

"Papa, who is that gentleman over there on the porch?"

"Don't you remember him, my child? He is the gentleman we met in the restaurant today who chatted so pleasantly with us while he waited about twenty-five minutes for his lunch."

"He doesn't seem very pleasant now, papa."

"Oh, no. He's at home now. See him tearing the newspaper into shreds and trying to throw his hat through the door. He is very angry because he has taken his wife a little over four minutes to get his supper ready."—Indianapolis Sun.

A Hindoo Superstition.

When visits are exchanged by the friends of the Hindoo bride and groom to complete arrangements for the wedding, great attention is paid to omens, which are considered especially potent then. For instance, if the groom's messengers should meet a cat, a fox or a serpent they turn back and seek a more propitious time for the errand. After the bride's father has received the offer he must delay replying until one of the ubiquitous lizards in his house has chirped.—Woman's Home Companion.

HIS HORSES WERE WOODEN

But All the Same He Had to Pay For a Livery License.

As "his honor" sat on the bench from which even handed justice was dispensed in the town of Lavilla, which flourished way down in Florida before the days of Greater Jacksonville, he was amazed to note among the prisoners at the bar a "paleface."

Casting the eagle eye of the law over the room, he was agitated still more to observe a "biled" shirt and standing collar and that these were worn by another white man.

The marshal, being called on, explained that one white gentleman was arrested by him for running a "flying jinny" without a license, and the other was his lawyer. To a man cast in a less heroic mold than the mayor such complete smashing of all records and invading of precedent would have been a Waterloo. A white man arrested in Lavilla and a lawyer appearing to plead in its court! To what are we coming?

Repressing all signs of such a strain on his judicial composure, the mayor announced that to fittingly mark so great an occasion he would disregard the calendar and take up the white man's case first.

The lawyer demanded the immediate discharge of the prisoner on the ground that there was no ordinance requiring "flying jinny" to pay a license and threw the court on its "beam ends" by asking for a copy of the ordinance book.

No one had seen it in years. Many doubted if there had ever been one. A whispered consultation was held between the mayor and the marshal and a search instituted which revealed the book, with a brick on top of it, supplying the place of a missing leg of the stove.

After looking vainly through the book for law on "flying jinny's" his honor delivered judgment as follows:

"Ordinance No. 11 requires all keepers of livery stables to pay a license of $10 and imposes a fine of twice the amount for running without a license. The defendant must pay both the fine and the license."

"But," objected the lawyer, "this man don't run a livery stable; he runs a 'flying jinny'."

"He keeps horses for hire, doesn't he?"

"Yes, but they are wooden horses, and he charges a nickel for one ride."

"The ordinance makes no fine distinction. It says livery stables require a license. A livery stable is a place where horses are kept for hire. It makes no difference whether they are wooden horses or 'meat' horses. Next case, Mr. Marshal."—New York Mail and Express.

Stone Throwing.

A propensity to throw stones regardless of consequences has been one of the earliest signs of natural depravity among men since time began and, we fear, must continue that way until the millennium ushers in the era when bad boys are no more and stones are confined to their proper and legitimate uses.

Anyway, the mischief wrought by this vicious and execrable habit looms up into serious proportions when the figures are given out by plate glass insurance men showing that it costs not less than $250,000 a year to make good the losses thus caused by reckless boys in this country alone.

With stone throwing costing $250,000 a year, carelessness in setting fires costing hundreds of millions more and heedless accidents causing immense sacrifice of property, the good people have many bills to foot which ought not to be theirs.—Leslie's Weekly.

The Coffee Heart.

The largest part of the coffee grown in the world is consumed in the United States, and some of our life insurance societies are beginning to realize how its excessive use increases the risks of life. Its effect is in shortening the long beat of the heart, and medical examiners for insurance companies have added the term "coffee heart" to their regular classification of the functional derangements of that organ. These physicians advise that the use of coffee be limited to not more than two cups a day. Coffee toppers, they say, are plentiful and are as much tied to their cups as the whisky toper. The effect of the coffee upon the heart is more lasting and consequently worse than that of liquor.—Detroit Free Press.

Advance Prayers.

A young Germantown mother in putting her five-year-old son to bed noticed that he clambered under the covers without saying his prayers. She grew reproachful. "Why, Warren, mother never knew you to forget your prayers before."

"Indeed, mother," was the reply, "I didn't forget. Grace and I said them for four nights during the rain yesterday, when we couldn't play. We would have got through the whole week if nurse had not come to dress us."

His Queer Way.

Gargan—In what way?

THE WORTHLESSNESS OF PETITIONS.

One of these days, somebody will start an anti-petitioning society, to be composed of people who, on principle, will never sign any petition for any man whom they do not know all about. It won't have a large membership, at first, but it should grow and some day be of respectable proportions. The existence of such a society would of itself be an educational influence for good. There are too many men who sign petitions merely because they are asked. They know nothing about the man whose interests they are supporting, but take it for granted that he is all right because they see some other names of good men on the paper which they are asked to sign. These papers have a certain amount of influence, for people suppose that men who give an endorsement mean what they say.

An organization has been formed to right the wrongs which, it is alleged, have been done to the memory of Aaron Burr. It will be a good thing for printers, for if all American literature is expurgated of all that has been published derogatory to Mr. Burr, all the American histories will have to be revised and reprinted. When this club has finished its work, it might be well to try to fix up the reputation of Benedict Arnold.

Mayor Collins has introduced a new style of veto message. He closes such documents by prefixing the word "respectfully" to his autograph. This must not be taken for more than it means. He doesn't wish to be understood that he respects the judgment of the co-ordinate branch of the government.

In the pope's appeal to Christians to pray for the restoration of peace in South Africa, he shows his mastery of adjectives. He applies the word "noble" to the British and "gallant" to the Boers. Neither can find any fault with that selection.

The farmers are unsparring in their denunciations of the manufacturers of oil-margarine for coloring it, but we notice that the same farmers color their butter without any scruples. No "false pretences" in that.

Our army in the Philippines continues to capture "the last of the Filipino generals." But it is easy to make new ones, and the supply is likely to be equal to the demand for some time.

The Colossus of Rhodes was one of the seven wonders of the ancient world, but Rhodes the Colossus, who has just died, was a greater one in the world of today.

This is the season when all is not harmony between church music committees and the choirs.

STYLISH SPRING COSTUMES
GOWN OF DARK BLUE ZIBELINE.
The New Hip Yoke.

For early spring wear the tailor-made idea still prevails, the gowns on the whole showing a far greater simplicity than has been the case for the last few seasons. Our illustration shows a gown of dark blue zibeline, the eton showing a very novel effect in the way of stitching. The jacket is cut without a collar and the revers may be either of striped silk or trimmed with straps. The skirt is cut with a yoke below which are wide tucks stitched down with white Corticelli silk.

Quite a new material is the doublefaced linen which will undoubtedly arrive at the height of popularity during the summer and will be employed to evolve some very fetching gowns. Very little trimming is required on them as the reverse side of the linen will answer admirably for this purpose. A wide latitude is given the skirts, although the fundamental principle—flaring at the hem—is still adhered to. This effect is gained in different ways, either with curved seams or with a flounce, and is sometimes still further increased with clusters of tucks, or with small inset panels at the hem of contrasting material and color. It stands to reason that heavy goods like homespun, tweed and mixed fabrics in general will make up much more satisfactorily in a plain, gored skirt.

How To Gain Flesh

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is strange, but it often happens.

Somehow the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food, which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.

A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health; if you have not got it you can get it by taking

RAILROAD SCORED.

Railroad Commission Will Examine Books of Concord & Boston Street Railroad.

Chairman Jackson, of the railroad commission, was disparaging in his comments Monday upon the act of the Concord & Boston Street Railway company in making an alleged misrepresentation of its financial standing, filed for the purpose of securing permission for the issuance of $50,000 bonds. The chairman said that it had been made perfectly clear to the board that Mr. Mansfield had submitted to Mr. Hodges a report that led to his being deceived as to the true condition. The board felt as far as it was within its power to act that there had been clear proof of an attempt to deceive people.

As a result of Monday's hearing the company, through its counsel, has asked permission to withdraw its petition. The request was denied.

C. F. Choate, counsel for the railroad company, denied that there was any intention of deception. The commission, however, did not change its views and in a cross-examination of Mr. Mansfield, called as a witness by the railroad company, Chairman Jackson secured the admission that Mansfield was aware Mr. Hodges was being deceived.

Chairman Jackson said "The board has felt that it was clearly informed as to the matter. We made some inquiries as to the item of real estate. It was evident to us that the financial statement was wrong, to what extent we knew not. We now ask that the books and papers of the company be left with the board for expert examination. We feel that this is the most important step. We have felt that the road was an extremely high priced road, and when we discovered that there was a construction company we endeavored from the first to find out who composed it. From the very beginning we have felt that the company was very shady. We have passed upon the degree of wrongdoing which should attain to anyone.

"The matter is the petition of the company for an issue of bonds and the board is bound to treat it from all standpoints. We could not permit the withdrawal of the petition. It is a matter which should be investigated. It has great public significance. We are not trying in criminal proceedings. Our work is to issue the bonds. It is a serious matter to furnish this board with any sworn statements. We say nothing as to the position of the treasurer, but we ask for the books.

"We will examine the books through the services of an expert accountant." The hearing was then closed.

THE LEGEND OF ATLANTIS.

(William Ruthven Flint.)

Eternal peacefulness and calm,
Beneath the Ocean's heaving tide,
Enfolded Atlantis, and her towers
Her towered walls and portals wide.
A gloomy splendor seems to glow
O'er all the place, but not a breath,
Nor sound of joy, nor sound of woe,
Disturbs this Paradise of Death.

Within those walls a city fair
Is seen, with pinnacles and towers
And palace-hall and garden, where
The golden Atlantean people bow.
But all are draped in sea-moss gray,
And sea-moss overhangs the wall,
And gray sea-moss the fountains play,
And mournful sea-moss clings to all.

Coral trees the gardens shade,
And in the branches coral birds
Thrill their throats with songs unmade,
Songs once sweeter far than words.
Below the cliffs in the shadowy gulf,
Glittering with pearls bloom of dew,
The coral-petalled flowers bloom,
Fresh with never-fading hue.

Beneath an archway long and low,
A river runs, and murmurs
Its waters flow, or seem to flow,
In soft and silent placidness.
Around a boat the waters gleam;
Before the bow, with shimmering flash,
The dancing ripples rise and break.

But alabaster is the stream;
The forms that in the boat recline
Are marble forms, that coldly gleam,
Tho' warm with youth their faces shine.

They seem a lover and his love,
For on her cheek he strives to press
His lips, that linger still above,
And cannot give the fond caress.

Upon the archway long and low
A legend strange is writ in gold:
"When yonder boat shall glide below
This arch, and yonder youth shall fold
The maiden in his arms, the spell
That holds Atlantis fast shall cease.
Till then no power in Heaven or Hell
The dread enchantment shall release."

A thousand weary years are gone,
And all is changed in the scene;
For still the boat sails slowly on
Amid the alabaster's sheen;
And still the lover seeks his bliss,
And on the empty air is vain
To print his eager, useless kiss,
His kiss that ever falls in vain.

And still a sombre peace and calm,
Beneath the Ocean's heaving tide,
Enfolded Atlantis, and her towers
Her towered walls and portals wide;
And sad and solemn splendors glow
O'er all the place, but not a breath,
Nor sound of joy, nor sound of woe,
Disturbs this Paradise of Death.

INTERESTING LETTERS.

Mrs. Burrill received, Tuesday last, two letters from her son, C. H. Burrill, who is an engineer on the U. S. gunboat Vicksburg. The letters are here given in full, except such personal matters as have no interest for those outside of the family. Mr. Burrill does not expect to return until May, 1902.

Nieu Omang, China, Feb. 7, 1902.

You will have to excuse me for being so long in writing to you, but time went so fast here that I hardly know where it has gone myself. We arrived here the day after Thanksgiving, and I don't think that we shall be able to get away before the middle of April. You will probably be kind of surprised to learn that we don't leave here we will go to Nagasaki, Japan, to dry our goods, which we have here, and will probably leave there next summer and go to the Behring sea. We are having a fine time here and everybody is enjoying good health. The English and American sailors are very friendly, and we have each got club rooms in the town. The English sailors give a minstrel show in the town hall one night a week, and the next, and we are assisted by the residents of the town. We are making fun for ourselves as well as the citizens. The European people are well pleased to have us here because they don't know what a time trouble may start here and they don't want to fall back on us for protection. They can all tell about these foreign countries, but I have not seen any place yet that compares with the United States. I have made several friends here in Nieu Omang, and one of them is the acknowledged leading mining and railroad engineer in this country. His name is Mr. Tolson, and he drives a car of eight hundred dollars a month from this Russian railroad, besides what he makes in mining engineering. I have been offered a salary of three hundred Mexican dollars, equal to one hundred and twenty of our money, a month, to go as engineer in the mines up in Central Manchuria when my time is out. The work is too dangerous on account of the Chinese brigands that infest the interior of the country.

We are working every day overhauling our engines and boilers, as this gives us a chance that we would not have if we were mining. My intentions are to get out, to get a marine or a stationary engineer's license, and I know that I will not have to wait long in getting a job as my experience in here has not done me any harm. I have had a lot of a pretty tough experience at times, and I think that is the only way that some people can learn anything, and I happen to be unfortunate enough to be one of them. I hope that this letter will reach you and find you all well. I remain, as ever, Your son, Charles H. Burrill.

Nieu Chwang, Feb. 8, 1902.

When I wrote to you last we were down in the Philippine Islands, fighting the insurgents. The same day that I mailed my last letter to you we received sudden orders from the navy department to make all possible haste to this place. We sailed the next day and got under way that same night with a twenty-two hundred mile run ahead of us. We took us twelve days to make on account of two days' rough weather we experienced in the Straits of Formosa. This place is situated thirteen miles up the Iloilo river, which empties into the Gulf of Tien Fong. There are two man-of-war here besides us, and we are all buried in mud dry docks, and we can't get out of here until next spring, and we are warned that the weather will be pretty bad. The Japanese have been here during the Chinese trouble, and Russia is holding the place at present, and I don't think it will be long before we will be able to get up on account of the ice. If I were you I would not send so many papers up here, because the postage is very high in this country. The mail, the real papers of the day we came in here from one of our colleagues, and I thank you very much for them. I received a very nice letter from Mr. Priest, and I can't help but think that a good good man he is. His letter was full of good advice. I was looking in the log book the other day to see how many miles we have been in the last year, and I find we have sailed twenty-eight thousand, equal to the distance around the world, and I guess before we get through that I will make home overland by rail from Frisco. I have not got married out here yet, and I guess that there is not much danger either. I don't suppose that I will know the town when I get back there, with all the improvements that are going on, but when I do you won't be able to fire me out of the house unless you call in the whole police force. We are having some pictures taken of the ship and when we get them I will send you one, so that you will have a general idea how we look in mud dry docks. The only thing that I like about this place is that we will get plenty to eat and not much to do for five months. Hoping that you are all well, I remain, as ever, Your son, C. H. Burrill.

In the second letter Mr. Burrill obviously does not refer to the one above. He refers to one written about four months ago, which also appeared in the Enterprise.

J. W. Ronco, the hairdresser, is still in the same business. He continues to give artistic cuts and the cleanest shaves.

His Seat.
Mrs. Gaussip-I saw Mr. Stockson Bonds at the upholsterer's yesterday. I guess he's going to get married and furnish a home.

IT LACKED NOVELTY

A COLLECTION OF HEIRLOOMS THAT WEARIED AN OBSERVER.

The System of Renting Out Family Glory and Supplying Ancestral Trappings at So Much Per Hour Has Its Drawbacks.

Two guests were being shown through a Philadelphia mansion in which a nouveau riche broker was entertaining a party of fashionable friends. The splendid array of family heirlooms, all bespeaking a lineage of earliest colonial origin, deeply impressed one of the party. He was a stranger but lately arrived from Baltimore. Oddly enough, his companion, a Philadelphian, seemed flippantly indifferent to these treasured relics of a family's honored history.

"Remarkable collection of heirlooms our host has," remarked the stranger as he stopped before a battle scarred sword of Revolutionary days.

"Yes," drawled the Philadelphian cynically, "very interesting. But unfortunately it lacks the charm of novelty for me. Already this season I've seen the same batch of relics in three other Philadelphia houses."

"How could that be?"
"Oh, simple enough. It only means that all four families, our host and the three others I refer to, hired their ancestral trappings from the same man."

"Hired them?"
"Yes, hired them. We have in this city an enterprising collector of colonial junk who makes a business of renting out family glory to all who were unfortunate enough to be born without it."

"Whew!" was the only comment the astonished Baltimorean could utter.

And doubtless many Philadelphians would be moved to say "Whew!" if they could learn how many members of the Quaker City social elite are constrained to seek the assistance of the heirloom dealer when they wish to give a brilliant function.

It is a deception that is forced upon them, for unless you have distinguished appearing forbears you stand little chance of penetrating the sacred precincts of the local fashionable set.

Ancestry, not cash, is the open sesame, and even if a man can claim some sort of a family tree his pretensions are questioned unless he can show some of the furniture or portraits that his American forefather brought with him on the Mayflower or the Welcome.

Of course if the two vessels named had been as large as the Great Eastern and had been loaded with nothing but heirlooms they couldn't have carried half the stock needed to launch the descendants of Pilgrim fathers into society. Hence the need of an heirloom dealer.

He has his warehouses in Pine street, in a part of the city which was once the center of fashion, but is now deserted by that element in consequence of the westward movement of the city's elite.

Ostensibly he is a curio dealer, but his revenue is mainly derived from furnishing and hanging the walls of fashionable dwellings with century old portraits.

This clever manipulator of men's vanities has ancient, straight backed furniture and copper kettles and snuffers for candles and bullseye watches and similar relics of ancient grandeur, all at your disposal for a night, when you, poor fellow, with money, but no ancestors, want your friends to know what an old family yours is! He also has rare furnishings for libraries and drawing rooms which you may rent if you have the price.

It matters not from what part of the country the applicant hails or what particular descent he wishes to claim, his needs are promptly filled.

For those who wish to pose as lineal descendants of the stanch old colonial patriots who fought the stamp tax and defied the power of King George at Bunker Hill and drew up the Declaration there is especially attractive stock.

For the haughty cavalier who "came over" with Lord Delaware there are costumes and furniture and portraits of more elaborate style, as befits the past of emigrants who in England basked in the favor of the king and were participants in brilliant court ceremonials.

The Quaker City allegiance to the honored memory of William Penn is a sentiment that the curio dealer has been careful to cherish.

On his walls he has portraits of studious looking Quakers. On his shelves are modest Quaker clocks that did service in the days when the founder was exchanging thirty blankets for Philadelphia.

There are Quaker walking sticks, tinder boxes, documents on all subjects, household utensils a legion.
It is true that this system of supplying ancestors has its disadvantages. Contretemps such as the one revealed at the beginning of this article are bound to occur. The hawklike eye of a connoisseur, trained to recognize instantly the value, authenticity and history of antiques, often pierces the deception and remembers seeing the "treasured family heirlooms" somewhere else. But in the main people are gullible, and the wealthy but plebeian aspirant for social honors vaunts the blueness of his blood and points with pride to his hired heirlooms without much danger of discovery.

And meanwhile the crafty Pine street dealer smiles, waxes rich and echoes a celebrated remark of Puck's regarding the average intelligence of mortals.—Philadelphia North American.

POOL.

There is no more exhilarating pastime to the man who uses his brain excessively than that of pool playing. It furnishes a radical change from the routine of constant thinking in regular channels for it brings into use a diversity of thoughts entirely foreign thereto and therefore recreative in character. Besides, it affords much wholesome physical exercise otherwise. Our pool room at No. 491 Mass. Ave., Arlington, is a retreat for those who would, for a brief time, order dull care away. It is kept in the most orderly manner and we solicit the patronage of gentlemen. We have no room for idlers or loungers of a social caste who can not mingle with gentlemen.

A Normandy Anecdote.

A strange old world privilege, dating back to the time when the Norsemen came to Normandy, was exercised last year in the island of Guernsey. It is called the "Clameur de Haro." By the ancient law of the island a person who thinks his land rights are being infringed upon has only to draw up a statement of the case, which he swears to before two witnesses. This he then presents to the bailiff of the island and, dropping upon one knee, cries out in French: "Oh, Rollo, my prince, succor me! I am wronged!"

This proceeding acts as an injunction, and the person complained of as trespasser has to stay his trespass until the matter has been adjudicated upon by the courts. This right of issuing one's own injunction by calling upon Rollo was given to the people of Guernsey by Rollo or Hrolf, the Norwegian pirate who made himself the first Duke of Normandy in 911, and there is probably no example of a legal procedure of like antiquity which is today carried out in the same way as that in which it was first instituted.

Greek Husband Housekeepers.

In Greece it is the custom for the man of the house to go out early in the morning and not only to order the day's food, but to send along with the boy who delivers it explicit orders how he wishes to have it cooked. In this connection it should be remarked that any man of Greece can cook any Greek dish. Grecian women seldom go to market and often do not know how to cook as well as their husbands.

These people eat very lightly in the morning, the meal consisting of fruit. At noon comes the first real meal, the breakfast. From noon until 4 o'clock they sleep. This is the mid-day siesta. To call upon a Greek at this time were quite as rude as to call upon an American at a corresponding hour in the morning. At 4 o'clock another light luncheon is eaten. The dinner, or hearty meal, is not eaten until late in the evening, sometimes as late as 9 or 10 o'clock.—Good Housekeeping.

The Gummed Flower.

You may buy upon the street flowers which to the eye are of a bloom as fine and a growth as fresh as any which could be procured at the most costly establishment. You buy them for a song and bring them home, when, lo! to your astonishment and dismay they fall to pieces at a breath like a cardboard house. They have been subjected to one of the "tricks of the trade." It is known as the "gumming process." A single drop of gum is inserted with a sharp pointed instrument into the center of each calyx, and by this means the conformity of the bloom is preserved until the flowers are sold. The composition of the gum is such as to dry up and set immediately, becoming invisible even to the closest scrutiny.—Everybody's Magazine.

FIRE ALARM IMPROVEMENT.

Article 36 of the town warrant, "to see if the town will appropriate the sum of $500 for extending and improving the fire alarm system," should not fall of an affirmative vote at the town meeting Monday night. The fire alarm system of Arlington, while so far it has been kept by constant and vigilant care in a condition to do its utmost, neither is modern in its details nor has it anything in reserve to fall back upon should accident disarrange the working of the apparatus at an inopportune moment. The alarm system is worked entirely on one circuit at present, which is already overloaded, and should lightning strike any one portion of that circuit the whole business would be put out of commission at once. The first necessity is the separation of the one circuit into four, connecting the boxes therewith alternately, and the installation of a repeater which will indicate each of the four from the other three, and yet at the same time repeat the calls automatically on all four. The obvious advantage to be derived thereby is that in case of an accident happening to one circuit, there will be three others left to depend upon.

The need of the department, next, if not first, in importance, is the installation of additional boxes. Not for nine years have new fire boxes been put in. Fifteen would not be too many, but seven are practically essential. A good policy to establish would be that of putting one or two boxes each year as the town grows. More alarm bells are also needed. The lower section of the town is protected by a gong on a pole. A bell is wanted with electrical connection to operate automatically. A good one is on hand for the purpose. The church bell at present connected is too light and cannot be heard at any distance. A 2000-pound bell on the Pierce and Winn building would make noise enough at least, to attract attention, which the present one does not.

While it is true that taxes are high already and that there are many other needs calling for expenditure of money, the fact yet remains that the protection against fire is not adequate. The breaking of a single strand may at any moment throw out the entire alarm system. From a broken down condition two years ago, the present management has built the system up so far as is possible with the present apparatus, and no breaks have occurred, fortunately. But the patching policy is "penny wise and pound foolish" in the end. Arlington is bound to grow, but folks don't like to buy or build in a town that is insufficiently protected against fire.

THAT BAD BOY.

That bad boy who is oftentimes thought to be the worst boy in the whole neighborhood may not be so bad after all. Of course he gets restless and is more or less frequently up to mischief. "He is a destructive little imp," you impatiently declare, when the truth is, he is only apparently destructive, that he may prove himself constructive. He takes your watch all apart, it may be, that he may try his hand in putting it together. The live boy who is up to date believes in the analytical way of doing things. He has an irresistible desire to resolve everything into its primary parts. He doesn't well understand how to build up, until he first tears down. We often say that this or that boy is going to the bad, when, as a matter of fact, he is aiming in a natural way straight for the good. We have a good deal of faith in the so-called bad boy. It is always a delight to meet that lad of tender years who manifests a pushing, restless life, even if he does now and then run butt against things. It takes your half bad boy, as you call him, to see things as they are, and be it remembered he seldom or never loses sight of anything that is to be seen. He is the first to learn of the coming circus, and if he hasn't any pin money he at once sets his wits at work that he may divine some way by which he can crawl under the tent, and so see the clown. Your so-called bad boy not only makes things interesting for himself, but he makes them interesting for others. He is an inventive genius in the world of amusements. He is up to all sorts of games that are not found in the books. He makes things lively wherever he is, and all on account of his irrepressible life. It always runs counter to our human nature, whenever we hear the little Sunday school boy singing at the top of his voice, "I want to be an angel, and with the angels stand."

We have a liking for that little fellow who is just bubbling over with the fun he has here below. Yes, we do have lots of sympathy with, and love for, that bad boy. But we insist all the while that he is not the bad boy which in your impatient moments you take him to be. He is simply using every nerve and muscle of his body that he may come into that greater world of active seething life which lies just ahead of him. His thousand and one tricks, annoying as they may be to us older grown, are only his birth struggles into a more manly life.

"I MADE THINGS HUM."

"When I was in business I just made things hum" is the way the young man often puts it, who, with his hands in his pockets, and a cheap cigarette in his mouth, leisurely whistles away his time. There is an astonishing number of young men with a good sprinkling of older grown in every community who have accomplished wonderful things, and they don't hesitate to tell you of their achievements. These little omnipotents will discount you in your business, every day in the week. They can outpace the minister, they can outstep the lawyer, they can heal the sick where the educated physician fails, and as to running a newspaper, what haven't they done! They know all about journalism from A to Z. They well understand how to hustle for news, and in case there is no news, then their inventive genius will set its wits to work to create news. Well, these smart (?) fellows have always existed, and will continue to live on, and they serve a purpose, after all. They act the farce after the more serious and instructive play of the hour has been rendered. One needs to have lots of patience with these "humming" fellows. The better way is to say, "Yes, yes," to all they claim, and so lose no time on them. To attempt to convince them that there are other people who know what is the next best thing to do will prove of no avail. So keep about your business in your own way, leaving the "know it all" and the "do it all" to bore the next man who comes along the street.

CHEAPER RENTS.

In answer to the demands for cheaper rents, why wouldn't it be possible for the real estate men of Arlington and her builders and contractors to secure lots a little apart from the business portion of the town at such prices that convenient cottages might be erected thereon at twelve or fifteen dollars rental a month? It needs no mathematical demonstration to prove that a man receiving not more than twelve or fifteen dollars salary per week can ill afford to pay twenty or twenty-five dollars a month for his home. And yet, in spite of this fact, rents will always keep pace with the price of building lots, and logically so. Rents will always be high so long as building lots command high prices—so that relief can come only as cottages shall be erected—outside of the business and residential part of the town. Or why could not neat and convenient tenements, sufficiently roomy to accommodate a half dozen or more families, be erected for such a sum as to rent the same at living prices to the tenants? At any rate, this demand for cheaper rents is an important one and ought somehow to be met, so that the working man may not be over-anxious and distressed about his monthly rent.

KNOW YOURSELF.

In order to know other people, all one has to do is first to know himself. Start from yourself as a centre, and then will your estimation of men and things be generally correct. We misjudge largely, for the reason that we try to persuade ourselves that we are quite unlike other people, when, as a matter of fact, we are all as much alike as two peas in a pod. There is no man so unfortunate, there is no man so selfish, there is no man so low down in a wicked life, that the best of us do not represent. That man who recognizes the fact that in him are all the elements of whatever is good and brave is in condition to get at the world just as it is. When one honestly relates his own personal experiences in life, then will he gain audience. Don't gather your immaculate robes about you, saying, "I am better than others," for the truth is you are very like other people.

THE 19TH OF APRIL.

The historic 19th of April occurs two weeks from today. Preparations for its observance must be hastened. As the Enterprise said last week this is an affair belonging especially to Belmont, Lexington and Arlington, and the costs for the due celebration of the day must be provided for by this trio of towns. If this celebration is to amount to anything adequate appropriations should be made at the coming town meetings that the 19th of April, 1902, may be observed in a manner worthy of those brave farmers "who left their ploughshares in the mould" and hastened to Lexington and Concord to drive back the invaders.

The suggestion has been made that it would be a good plan for the several churches to install telephones in the homes of their clergymen. Such a procedure would result in great convenience not only to the ministers but to their constituencies.

In an interview, a few days ago, Chief Detective Parker, of Providence, R. I., said, among other things, that Chief of Police Harriman, of Arlington, is a very efficient officer, and he mentioned particularly his ability and success in hunting up the wrongdoer.

The town meeting, Monday evening, should remember in its appropriations the just demands of Arlington's police force.

A BRILLIANT RECEPTION.

An enjoyable and brilliant reception was given Monday evening by Mrs. Geo. Livermore Fisk, 409 Massachusetts avenue, to St. John's choir. The several rooms of Mrs. Fisk's pleasant home were decorated with artistically wrought flowers, representing those most fragrant in the floral world. Apple blossoms and Easter lilies were on every table, and in every visible nook and corner of the house, and butterflies of every hue and color were apparently sipping honey therefrom. Each guest had a little ingeniously wrought basket filled with choice candies in the form of eggs, acorns, shells and so on. The guests enjoyed themselves at progressive whist, and prizes were given the winners. Mr. Sullivan, the Episcopal choir master, sang several selections, among which was "Palm Branches." The evening was a foretaste of the summer time. So representative was the house with its decorations that photographs were taken by an artist from the Litchfield studio.

Miss Constance Yeames entertained Miss Catherine Haxton, of Jamaica Plain, over last Sunday, and at the senior social at the high school, Monday evening.

Miss Helene Black, daughter of General Black, of Chicago, a member of the sophomore class at Vassar college, is spending the Easter vacation with her classmates, Misses Helen and Annie Wood, at the residence of their father, Wm. E. Wood, 38 Academy street. The young ladies kept themselves on the move, visiting historical points in the city of Boston. The firm of Wm. T. Wood & Co. was represented at the Vermont Ice Dealers association convention which was held Thursday of this week at Burlington, Vt., by Wm. E. Wood and his son, Harold E. Wood. They went up Wednesday and returned Friday. They exhibited an assortment of ice tools and also presented the members of the convention with beautiful brass souvenirs which will be useful to them in properly filling their ice pails.

Helen and Annie Wood have been selected by the senior class of Vassar college as two of the sixteen young ladies who have been chosen from the sophomore class to carry the "daisy chain" which is a very picturesque feature of the commencement exercises, held in June. As the class numbers 200 members the Enterprise is proud to record that Arlington will be so far represented in this honorable function of the graduating exercises at Vassar.

Walter Faxon, of Arlington, arrived at Liverpool, Monday, on the Dominion line steamer Merion.

Mrs. J. W. Harrington, of Lewis avenue, who recently underwent a serious operation at a hospital in Boston, is reported as doing nicely and in a few days will have passed the danger of complications setting in.

The entertainment and dance, to be given by the Golden Rule lodge, in Grand Army hall, next Tuesday evening, is for a very important factor in all home life, but she is an important factor in all successful church work. So congratulations are due to the Unitarian church and society that they have doubled their ministry.

Rev. Mr. Cutter, formerly pastor of the Unitarian church, read at the meeting of the society, Tuesday evening, an interesting paper on the derivation and meaning of personal names. Mr. Cutter went back to the early scriptural proper names, showing in a variety of ways their derivation and meaning. A vote of thanks was extended Mr. Cutter for his paper. James A. Bailey gave the society an old chimney crane taken from the Jason Russell house on Jason street.

It will be remembered that this is the same house where in Revolutionary times ten or twelve American soldiers were killed by the Red Coats. And it is said that even now blood stains are visible upon the walls leading to the cellar.

The next meeting of the society will be held Tuesday evening, April 23. There were twelve candidates for initiation in Ida F. Butler Rebekah lodge of O. O. F., Monday night.

Miss Mary A. Swadkins, who has been for nearly five years the organist of St. John's Episcopal church, has resigned to accept the position as organist of the Warren Avenue Baptist church, Boston.

Miss Swadkins, by her faithful service, has endeared herself to those who attend St. John's, and who without exception regret her departure but wish her success in her new and larger field.

Miss Helen Bott, of Academy street, and Miss Alice Reed, of Maple street, are home from Abbot Female seminary, Andover, spending their vacation.

The prizes awarded were handsome cues. The Arlington baseball club expects to open the season soon with one of the best teams ever brought together to represent the town. Frank M. Rowe, with the assistance of James Mahoney, is fast getting matters into shape, and outside practice will soon begin. A meeting will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in K. of C. hall, and all persons interested are invited by the management to attend.

For a social, soon to be held, for the benefit of the club. The whist and dancing party given in Grand Army hall, Wednesday evening, by Jesse G. Patten, 609 Massachusetts avenue, was one of the most enjoyable events of the season. Seventy-five couples were present, representing Boston, Cambridge, Somerville, Winchester, West Medford, Belmont, Lexington and Arlington. The several tables and whist played their best cards. Four prizes were awarded as follows: First prize, to F. A. Blakesy, West Medford; second prize, to D. G. Desmond, West Somerville; third prize, to W. Blanchard, East Lexington;

The evening was a success. The wedding reception of the Rev. and Mrs. Frederic Gill, Wednesday evening, at the home of the bride in Somerville, was a brilliant gathering of the many friends of the newly married pair. The Arlington friends gave greeting and extended their congratulations from 8 to 9 o'clock. The ladies were elegantly gowned in evening dress, while the gentlemen were in full dress. Mrs. William G. Rice, 20 Pelham terrace, and Miss Cairn Robbins, representing Arlington, were richly attired—Miss Robbins in white lace gown and Mrs. Rice in pink crepe de chine. The several rooms were tastefully decorated in red and green, the green predominating. The dining room, where ice and cake were served, was redolent with bud and flower. The bride and groom were the recipients of the warmest congratulations of their Arlington friends.

From 9 to 10 o'clock came the host of Somerville friends of the bride, and from them, who have known her since childhood, she and the groom were laden with good wishes. If Wednesday evening is prophetic of the future awaiting Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Gill, they may feel sure that their tomorrow will excel their yesterday in all that brings happiness.

HUNTING THE GORILLA.

An Animal West Africans Say Has the Soul of a Man.

Gorilla hunting is a distinct sensation even for the veteran hunter. This animal, which has become confused somewhat with fable and fiction, is a reality and a decidedly unpleasant one to engage. The west Africans are mortally afraid of it, believing that the brute contains the spirit of a man. They attribute to it all sorts of ferocities, like the carrying off of a human being, who is permitted to return after being deprived of toe and finger nails.

"Skilled hunters have never observed any of these doings, but they testify to the brute's strength and ferocity," says Allen Sangre in Ainslie's. "According to a French sportsman, a full grown gorilla can bite through a tree six inches thick in order to secure the sap and twist a gun barrel with the swollen bunches of muscle that serve for arms. His roar is terrifying and can be heard for a distance of three miles.

"I shall never forget how the first one impressed me," says the Frenchman, "for I had a bad attack of shakes. The woods had been filled some time with a barking roar, but I saw nothing until my guide clucked softly and pointed to a tree alongside which stood an immense male gorilla. There he remained but twelve yards away, boldly facing us with his huge chest, muscular arms, fiercely glaring deep gray eyes and a hellish expression, until I moved.

"At that he dropped to all fours and came six yards nearer, sitting up to beat his breasts with his huge fists—a defiance—so that it sounded like an immense drum. His roar was most singular, beginning with a kind of bark and deepening into a bass roll that literally resembled thunder. The short hair on his forehead was twitching, his powerful fangs showed unpleasantly, and, feeling he was about to attack and incidentally being scared green, I shot him through the heart. With a groan something human and yet brutish, he fell on his face and died quickly, like a man. He measured 5 feet 9 inches in length, his chest was 62 inches, and his arms spread 9 feet. I was glad to have the specimen, but somehow after that never cared to kill a gorilla unless he actually menaced me."

NOTHING WAS LOST.
An Omission in a Wedding Ceremony That Didn't Count.

A distinguished officer of the United States navy once told this story on himself:
At the time of his marriage he had been through the civil war and had had many harrowing experiences aboard ship, through all of which he kept courage and remained as calm as a brave man should. As the time for the ceremony came on, however, his calmness gradually gave way. At the altar, amid the blaze of brass buttons and gold lace marking the full naval wedding, the officer was all but stampeded and what went on there seemed very much mixed to him. Fearing the excitement of the moment would temporarily take him off his feet, the officer had learned the marriage ceremony letter perfect, as he thought, and he remembered repeating the words after the minister in a mechanical sort of way.

After the ceremony was over and all was serene again, including the officer's state of mind, the kindly clergyman came up to him and touched him on the shoulder.
"Look here, old man," he said, "you didn't endow your wife with any worldly goods."
"What's that?" asked the bridegroom, with something of astonishment in his voice.
"Why, I repeated the sentence 'With all my worldly goods I thee endow' several times and despite my efforts you would not say it after me."
The bridegroom seemed perturbed for a moment, and then a beaming light came into his face.
"Never mind, sir," he said. "She didn't lose a blessed thing by my failure."—Washington Star.

No "Tick" Obtainable.
Telegraph Operator—I am sorry, sir, but the rules of this company make it impossible for me to send you message "collect." That privilege we are not allowed to extend to absolute strangers.

Applicant—Do you mean for me to understand by that that you can't trust me?
Telegraph Operator—Under the circumstances, sir, it is impossible for me to do so.
Applicant—Well, that gets the best of me! I thought of all places on the face of the earth a telegraph office was the likeliest to get anything on tick.—Boston Courier.

Hiawatha.
"Such a confusing variance in the pronunciation of 'Hiawatha' exists both in dictionaries and in the speech of educated men and women," writes Elizabeth A. Withey in The Ladies' Home Journal, "that I have asked Miss Longfellow how the word is pronounced by the poet's family. She says the pronunciation which she always heard from the poet himself is Hi-a-wa-tha, the 'i' pronounced as it is in 'machine' or 'plique,' the second 'a' pronounced as it is in 'far' or in 'father.'"

All in the Family.
"Biffey and his son and the Widow Binglewood and her daughter are going to form a community of interests."
"How so?"
"Biffey marries the widow, and his son marries the daughter."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

His Taste in Refurnishing.
"Bigson says he has had his house refurnished during his wife's absence."
"As a surprise to her?"
"No; as a shock."—Detroit Free Press.

LUNGS THAT ARE LAZY.

Their Owners Digest Poorly and Catch Cold Easily.

Fresh air is a free gift, but it is like most of the gifts of heaven in that we must do our share of work to benefit by it. No one would expect to have a good fire just because a pair of bellows hung on a nail by the chimney, but this is exactly what many people expect of their lungs, which are really only the bellows given us by which to keep the fire of life burning bright and clear within us.

It is not too much to assert that lungs properly used in a comparatively close room will do more good than lazy lungs in an open field. This trick of lazy lungs is a habit, like any other, and may be overcome by persistent effort. Many persons, for example, are afflicted with a nervous habit of holding the breath unconsciously. These are the people who, in spite of plenty of time spent out of doors, yet catch cold easily, digest poorly and are always more or less "under the weather" physically.

When once the pernicious habit of poor, shallow breathing has been broken up, the health undergoes such marked improvement, there is such brightening of the spirits and improvement of the looks, that the luxury of deep breathing is not likely to be readily foregone.

A good way to start the new habit is to take deliberately a few minutes at stated intervals and devote them to proper breathing. If this is done systematically, the reformer will find himself unconsciously breathing more and more, until very soon he is obeying nature and really breathing to live.

Besides the gain to the general health which comes from the habit of deep breathing there is created a reserve strength and preparedness which is often of great service in warding off acute pulmonary diseases.—Youth's Companion.

TOWN MEETING.

The town meeting, next Monday night, should be attended by every citizen who can possibly be present. The finance committee appointed by the town will bring forward its complete report, made with the expenditure of much time and labor, and it is at least due them that a full meeting listen to the reading of their recommendations. There is considerable business to be done, and business which is vitally interesting to every voter and taxpayer in the town. The question of adjusting the appropriations of money for the maintenance of public offices and public works, always a knotty one at best, seems particularly so the present year. That the points at issue may be settled equitably and with the full knowledge of every citizen, all should make a special effort to attend.

THE HAT VS. THE HAIR.

Fads are oftentimes, if not always, follies. It is generally foolish to follow them, and sometimes dangerous. But there is one, which, if judiciously adopted by the menfolk, could do no harm, and would without doubt accomplish some good. One of the most noteworthy of the superficial facts about mankind at the present day is the extreme rapidity with which he is losing his hair. It is in part due to the strenuous life led today, expending in the brain the vital energy formerly left for hair nourishment. But it is due, probably, in the still greater part to the fashion of man's headgear. Womankind has a distinct advantage in that, while her hat is often far too heavy, it rests upon the top of her head, and does not press upon the small blood vessels which feed the scalp. The tight and scantily ventilated hat worn by the men today, with its practically impervious "sweat-band," leaves neither room nor necessity for growth of hair. It becomes, then, a question as to which is the more desirable, the hair or the hat. Monsieur Le Mode dictatorially says "hat"; Dame Nature, by far the better judge, says "hair." As soon as the chill, blustering of early spring is past, and the warmer days come, take off your hat and go bare-headed. Let the invigorating sunlight and the fresh breezes strengthen and revivify your scanty locks. Perchance the beneficent effects may penetrate within also, and freshen up your brain a bit. Take off your hat, and give your hair a chance.

"SWISS FESTIVAL."

The repetition of the Swiss festival, which was given originally in February, was repeated last evening. Among the new numbers on the program were an athletic exhibition by a class from the Hemenway gymnasium. There were also fencing bouts by ladies from Dr. Sargent's gymnasium and by a men's class under Prof. Seaborn. Another innovation was the dance after the festival proper, for which there were very novel orders. The floor committee were J. W. Crone, Frank Mason, Lester Redman and Edward Worthen. Otherwise, the festival was practically a repetition of the original performance in February. The managers of the festival are indebted to the G. A. R. hall for decorations, music, and the use of the hall. The band, including Messrs. Buck and Moakley, of Lexington, Lloyd, of the Heights, and others. The performance was a benefit for the Children's hospital.

bridge gave Belmont the lead at 7 to 2. Thursday afternoon of this week Somerville Y. M. C. A. was played.

Last week Monday morning our local police, aided by Cambridge officers, captured three men whom they believed to be responsible for some peculiar work, which has been done in this vicinity of late. About 12.30 a.m., Patrolman Thomas E. Murphy, while on Common street, saw an auto wagon, in which were three men, being driven across the railroad track, and down Concord avenue, toward Cambridge. The actions of the men seemed suspicious, but he was too late to head them off.
